Ramadan is a month unlike any other in the MENA region, when families and friends gather and celebrate together. Last year the coronavirus crisis changed the Holy Month beyond recognition, as lockdown and social distancing kept people apart. But despite physical limitations, the spirit of the season endured. For many brands, Ramadan is the busiest time of the year, and they were able to play an important role in helping people come together while staying apart, through imaginative and innovative executions from special offers to virtual reality to online iftars and more. This year may be a little more 'normal' than in 2020, but Covid-19 is still with us, and many restrictions and precautions are still in place. So how will this year's Ramadan look for brands? What will return to normal and what new traditions will be carried on from last year? Performance & Contextual Marketing / Behavioral Targeting Programmatic buying and other forms of ad tech and martech hold huge amounts of promise. But what does it take to use it right?
